Study method

We choose a thorough approach to best help you achieve the next steps in your daily practice.

Intake | Prior to the course, you are asked to fill in an intake form including questions regarding your personal work situation. These questions help you formulate your learning objectives.

Experienced facilitators | The sessions are led by an experienced facilitator who pays a lot of attention to your personal learning objectives and work situation.

Blended learning | At ICM we believe in blended learning, where individual online learning and learning as a group is combined. By gaining knowledge in advance, there is more time during a session to learn from each other.

Personal coaching | Your facilitator is your personal coach to help you identify next steps and to give you advice. Practical, clear and goal-oriented.

Exam preparation | Cases, exercises and group discussions help you become familiar with the material and prepare you in the best way for the exam. During the course, time is reserved to practise for the official Pragmatic Kanban Foundation exam.

Personal action plan | At the end of the course, you will write a personal action plan. This way you can continue working on what you have learned after the course is finished.
